The Crucifix By Cimabue

The Crucifix by Cimabue at Santa Croce (c. 1265) is a wooden crucifix, painted in distemper, attributed to the Florentine painter and mosaicist Cimabue, one of two large crucifixes attributed to him. The work was commissioned by the Franciscan friars of Santa Croce and is built from a complex arrangement of five main and eight ancillary timber boards.

Crucifix (Cimabue, Santa Croce) - Wikipedia

The Crucifix by Cimabue at Arezzo is a large wooden crucifix painted in distemper, with gold leaf, by the Florentine painter and mosaicist Cimabue, dated to c. 1267–71. It is the earliest of two large crucifixes attributed to him. It shows a painted representation of the near dead body of Christ on the cross, with Mary, mother of Jesus and John the Evangelist at either end of the cross beams. Its importance lies, in part, in the stylistic innovations and departure from some of the ...

The Crucifixion by Cimabue - Shadowproof

Upper Church, San Francesco, Assisi This large Crucifixion fresco is located on the east wall of the south transept. Its grand pathos surpasses anything of its time. In its overall structure and in several motivic details, it reveals points of contact with the slightly older reliefs of the Crucifixion by Nicola Pisano.

Crucifixion by CIMABUE

Only Cimabue's last work, the mosaic of St. John the Evangelist, in the Duomo of Pisa, is dated (1301-02). The large Crucifix, in S. Domenico, Arezzo, is generally accepted as his earliest work and datable before 1272. The frescoes in the upper church of S. Francesco, Assisi—some of which were damaged in the earthquake of 1997 and later restored—were probably executed between 1288 and 1290.
