Though these employer-friendly laws were on the books in the 1940s, 1950s, and 1960s, it was not until the 1970s that employers began to take full advantage of their power. Several key sources set the stage for this 1970s unraveling of workers' bargaining power under the law. First, a Republican Congress largely neutered workers' leverage in passing the 1947 Taft-Hartley Act over President ...

In MRTP, Act 1969, the greatest advantage was that it has fixed categories of unfair trade practices. This was helpful in predicting law and advance knowledge of what kind of conduct would amount to violations of provision. But the definition of MRTP Act, 1969 had a major shortcoming. It was too specific and it can be denied that human mind can invent new forms of unfair trade practices with ...
